PREFACE

This dissertation is but a fragment of the whole, the whole being ultimately a complete national bibliography. This project had its inception in the work of the W.P.A. Imprints Inventory employees. It is the result of their national survey of printing that formed the basis of this dissertation. The results were checked in the National Union Catalog at the Library of Congress and in the libraries reputedly having these publications.

A high degree of accuracy has been aimed for, but it is an inescapable fact that errors in such a huge undertaking are inevitable. Even while the dissertation was being written, publications were being added to some collections and separated from others, as evidenced by correspondence. It was also found through correspondence that many libraries have old uncataloged material which will have to be included eventually in this project.

The writer would like to express her gratitude to everyone who helped in this production. Specifically, she acknowledges the kind assistance given at the Maryland Historical Society in Baltimore, Md. The writer owes boundless thanks to the many, many, gracious librarians all over the United States who supplied by mail information she was unable to get firsthand. My public thanks to my husband who, in addition to giving the proverbial but important moral support, gave aid of a more substantial nature.

It is hoped that the efforts of so many have been rewarded in a real contribution to the field of Library Science.

CHAPTER I

HISTORICAL, LITERARY, AND PUBLISHING BACKGROUND

HISTORICAL

The years 1855 to 1857 in the United States marked the end of the peaceful and highly prosperous era that had begun after the end of the Mexican War in 1848, and ushered in the era of strife that culminated in the secession of the southern states. Perhaps the seeds of the strife in Maryland can be seen in the political, social, and economic happenings in that State.

It was during this period that many political parties came into prominence. Until 1852, the Whig and Democratic parties reigned supreme, but with the collapse of the Whigs, the Democrats found themselves with new challengers. The three new parties that were most influential were the Free-soil or Anti-slavery, the Republican, and the Know-Nothing.

The Free-soil or Anti-slavery party had few in number, but lacked little in energy. It is recorded that they opposed slavery in general and particularly in new parts of the country that were becoming states.¹

Slavery also became the basis of the formation of another party, the Republican Party. The people of the Middle West who banded together against the opening of new territory to slavery, became known as Republicans in 1854. Joining forces with the Republicans were the abolitionists. In 1840, they formed a party known as the Liberty Party that had as its aim the abolition of slavery in all states.² Having the same aim, the smaller group soon merged with the larger. Because of the platform of the Republicans, the party did not make rapid gains in the East and especially the Southeast.

It has been stated that it was not until 1856 that the first Republican meeting was held in Maryland. At the end of this meeting on September 11, 1856, in Baltimore, persons who attended were assaulted by mobs who also carried their violence to the office of the Wecker, a German Republican paper. The police had to be called to quell the disorder.³

The rise of the Know-Nothing Party or American Republican Party is involved in obscurity. For a long time it was a secret organization, and when members were questioned concerning it, they would reply, "I don't know." The first lodge in Baltimore was organized supposedly in 1852. In 1855, the Know-Nothings evolved as a distinct party and became a very strong one in Maryland. It can be noted that the main objects of the party were the passing of more stringent naturalization laws, and the exclusion of all foreign born citizens, and especially Catholics, from national, state, and city offices.⁴ The party also upheld slavery. In the election of 1855, the Know-Nothings carried 13 counties and Baltimore.⁵ The next year, election for mayor of Baltimore was held October 8, 1856. Candidates were Robert Clinton Wright, Democrat, and Thomas Swann, Know-Nothing. It is said that the election was attended by bloodshed and disorder to an unprecedented degree in the annals of an American city.⁶ The rioting continued throughout the entire day. Thomas Swann became mayor.

In November of the same year, presidential elections were held, and the Know-Nothings again dominated. All of Maryland's eight electoral votes were cast for Millard Fillmore, the Know-Nothing candidate. He received no other electoral votes. Violence also dominated the polls at this election. An eyewitness account reveals the seriousness of the situation:

"Our city, on the 4th of November, was again made the theater of the most prolonged and desperate rioting. Armed and organized associations, belonging to both political parties, resorted to firearms, with which they were liberally provided, and fought with ferocious and daring recklessness. Individual combats and minor affrays occurred at a number of polls, but the most serious took place in the vicinity of the second and eighth ward polls. In both of these riots eight persons were killed and about 150 were wounded. During the morning there was considerable ill-feeling displayed at the second ward polls, but up to three o'clock no serious disturbance occurred. At that hour a furious fight broke out, said to have originated from a stone being thrown into the crowd surrounding the window. Pistols were immediately drawn and fired by both parties. The Democrats drove the Know-Nothings from the polls and up High Street. The alarm was carried to the fourth ward polls, and a strong body of Know-Nothings started from there. In the vicinity of the second ward polls they were met and driven back. Further reinforcements were then received and the battle renewed. A good proportion of both parties by this time were provided with muskets, whilst others used pistols, and others skirmished with knives and clubs. Both parties fought with determination, and in many instances exposed themselves with the most reckless disregard of danger. The battleground was spread over portions of Fawn, Stiles, Exeter and High Streets, and the spectacle presented was a terrible and revolting one. As either party gained a temporary advantage, men would be seen running, with others shooting at them; the wounded were limping off and being carried away by their companions, whilst others begrimed with smoke and powder, and in some cases covered with blood, still kept up the fight, now firing singly and then again in volleys. In the surrounding neighborhood the utmost degree of excitement and consternation prevailed. Children were hastily gathered, the houses closed, and the occupants in many instances sought their garrets and collars to be out of harm's way.⁷

The question of slavery eventually grew out of the realm of local politics alone, but during these particular years Maryland's place in the debate was being determined. Because of Maryland's economic background, slaves had been imported to such a degree that in 1783 Maryland passed laws prohibiting the further importation of slaves.⁸ Opposition to slavery was indicated in other ways. Maryland's Abolition Society was the third largest in the country, and its Colonization Society, a group to deport slaves to a colony in Africa, was very active.⁹ Maryland's proximity to Virginia, Nat Turner's insurrection, and other factors tended to strengthen the pro-slavery sentiment. Hence, Maryland was divided on this important issue.

Although the years 1855 to 1857 saw the beginning of strife and economic decline in Maryland as well as in the rest of the country, there was some progress also. There were gains made in business, education, religion, and social affairs.

Among Maryland's main industries were tobacco raising, farming, fishing, and mining. The mining industry was a growing one in Maryland, and 1856 witnessed the organization of another in the long list of mines of Maryland. The Hampshire and Baltimore Company organized in Virginia in 1856 and had its office in Cumberland, Md.¹⁰ The Thomas H. Paul and Sons Iron Works was started in 1855 and was one of the most successful enterprises in Allegany County, with a branch in Cumberland, Md.

The banking business also made progress with the establishment in Frederick, Md., of the Franklin Savings Bank. It was incorporated by the General Assembly of Maryland in 1856.¹¹

Having opened its first public school in Baltimore in 1829, Maryland continued to progress in the field of education, with several notable contributions during the years 1855 to 1857. Maryland gained the distinction of establishing the second agricultural college in America with the incorporation in 1856 of the Agricultural College near Bladensburg in Prince George's County. Fifty thousand dollars was raised by private contributions, and the school was endowed with six thousand dollars a year.¹² Another school that made news was the Hagerstown Female Seminary, established by the Maryland Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church. The charter for the school was obtained from the Legislature in 1852, and its first class was graduated in 1857.¹³ On May 5, 1855, an ordinance was passed by the City Council of Baltimore, authorizing the commissioners of public schools to put into operation a school. On board a ship for the purpose of training men in the Merchant Marines in nautical matters and other studies. In September of 1857 the school opened, but at the beginning of the war it was discontinued.¹⁴

The year 1857 also witnessed the donation by George Peabody of three hundred thousand dollars to establish a cultural institute, which became known as Peabody Institute.¹⁵

Religious organizations played an important part in Maryland's history. The Protestant Episcopal, Catholic, German Reformed, Lutheran, Friends, Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, and others were among those represented in that state. 1855 witnessed the formation of another church. In this year, the German population in Hagerstown, desiring services exclusively in the German language, organized a congregation under the name of "Christ Church". The church was completed and dedicated in 1856.¹⁶

There were many secret and fraternal societies in Maryland, some of which dated back as far as the late eighteenth century. An organization of the Royal Arch Masonry existed in Maryland as early as 1766.¹⁷ The Independent Order of Odd Fellows had its origin in Baltimore in 1819. The Improved Order of Red Men is claimed to have existed in Annapolis in 1771. This order, with its motto of "Freedom, Friendship, and Charity", grew more rapidly in the state of Maryland than in any other state. In 1855, the Improved Order of Red Men erected a magnificent hall in Baltimore for the use of the different societies of Red Men.¹⁸

Against this political, social, and economic background that has been described, the writers of this period had much to draw from as evidenced by the number of imprints during these years, and, as evidenced by that same number, the publishing industry must have flourished.

MEN WHO MADE LITERARY HISTORY

JOHN HENRY ALEXANDER, 1812-1867.

Alexander was interested in many subjects, including science, railroading, topographical surveys, and coal mining. He was professor of mining and civil engineering at the University of Pennsylvania and professor of natural history at the University of Maryland. A man of varied accomplishments, he was also a noted linguist, a student of philosophy, and a writer of pure English prose. Two of his works are Report on Standards of Weight and Measures for the State of Maryland (1845) and A Universal Dictionary of Weights and Measures, Ancient and Modern (1850).

FRANCIS PRESTON BLAIR, 1791-1876.

Blair mixed journalism and politics. He contributed many political articles to the periodicals of the day. At President Jackson's invitation, Blair came to Washington to establish the Globe, the administration's organ. Blair also helped publish the Congressional Globe, daily proceedings of Congress. Some of his literary contributions are the following pamphlets:

Gen. Jackson and Jas. Buchanan, 1856
A Voice from the Grave of Jackson, 1856
To My Neighbors, 1850
To the Working Men, 1869

SOLEYMAN BROWN

Although he was called teacher, clergyman, and dentist, he also possessed considerable literary ability. Even though his first interest was dentistry, he contributed much poetry to the newspapers and periodicals of his day. Combining both interests, dentistry and poetry, he published in 1833 his best known work, Dentologia, a dental didactic poem, which was so popular that it won for him the title "the Poet Laureate of the Dental Profession."

GEORGE WASHINGTON BURNAP

Burnap, a Unitarian clergyman and writer, was a prolific and distinguished writer, contributing occasionally to the best journals and newspapers. He first came to Baltimore to be pastor of the First Independent Church of Baltimore, where he remained for 32 years, until his death. During those years, he also became regent of the University of Maryland, an original trustee of the Peabody Institute, and a founder of the Maryland Historical Society. He lectured and wrote often, explaining and defending the tenets of Unitarianism. Some of his works are Discourse on the Rectitude of Human Nature (1850), Popular Objections to Unitarian Christianity Considered and Answered (1848), Christianity, Its Essence and Evidence, and Lectures on the Sphere and Duties of Women.

ARTHUR CLEVELAND COXE, 1818-1896.

The outstanding writers were the theologians. Another in this category is Coxe, who became bishop in his church and who was a gifted writer. He published several volumes of ecclesiastical poetry, the best known of which is Christian Ballads (1840), appearing in many editions American and English. He organized in 1855 the Christian Literature Company which produced an edition of the Ante-Nicene Fathers. His Letter to Pius the Ninth, in 1869, was published in Europe in French, German, Greek, Bohemian, and Italian. Other works of his are Advent, a Mystery; Thoughts on the Services, and Impression of England.

DAVID EINHORN, 1809-1879.

This man, a rabbi born in Bavaria, came to the United States in 1855 to become the religious leader of the Mar Sinai Synagogue in Baltimore.

Regarding the German language as the official language of reform Judaism, he founded Sinai, a monthly German magazine devoted to Judaism. He published, in 1856, Olath Tamid, a reform modification of the traditional Jewish prayer book. He was the leading theologian of reform Judaism in the United States.

PATRICK KENRICK

Kenrick, who became a Roman Catholic archbishop, was a very eminent and prolific author of church literature. Among his works are Theologica Dogmatica, 4 volumes (1839-40); The Catholic Doctrine on Justification Explained and Vindicated, 1841; Treatise on Baptism, 1843. He is the author of the article "Roman Catholic Church" in Appleton's Cyclopedia. Before his death, he was engaged upon a revision translation of the Bible to supersede the English Douay Version, and had already published the New Testament and portions of the Old.

MARTIN J. KERNEY

Kerney was born in Frederick County and became author, editor, and teacher. He was a member of the Maryland legislature in 1852. He edited the Metropolitan Magazine for several years, compiled the Catholic Almanac for 1860-61, and wrote a number of school books.

These are but a few of the men who made literary history. They were selected because they seemed to have produced more than others in the literary world and to have accomplished much outside of that field also.

SOME OF THE PRINTERS AND PUBLISHERS OF THE PERIOD

The number of imprints of this period is sufficient evidence of the activity of the printers of the period. Some of the most active are discussed briefly here.

John Gruber, for instance, who left a printing business in Philadelphia to come to Hagerstown, became the most outstanding printer of that city. He is most famous, not for his volume of work, but for the printing of his well-known Hagerstown Town and Country Almanac. This Almanac was first published in English and German in 1812 and at once gained wide circulation. Although Gruber died in 1857, his Almanac has continued until today. ¹⁹

An outstanding printer and publisher in Baltimore was John Murphy. He established his printing and stationery house in Baltimore about 1857³⁵ and two years later became a publisher also. Murphy maintained high standards, publishing general as well as Catholic works, his specialty. It is said he undertook at a sacrifice theological works for which there was a small market. When other publishing houses refused manuscripts from Catholic writers, he undertook the job. He published at low cost to the consumer many Bibles, hymnals, prayerbooks in various languages, and devotional guides. ²⁰

The Statistical Gazetteer of the State of Maryland and the District of Columbia ²¹ gives a few glimpses into the activities of the printers through their advertisements. T. Newton Kurtz, for instance, has an advertisement which describes him as publisher, bookseller, stationer, and dealer in paper, and blank account book manufacture. He is also described as the publisher of the Standard English and German Lutheran Hymn Books, Catechism, Liturgy, Prayer book, and the general agent for the sale of all other Lutheran publications.

James S. Waters could possibly be described as a Stechert of his day. He specialized in importation of books with agents in London, Paris, and "Lioptic"[!] for all books published throughout Germany and France, including also Brussels, Florence, and Madrid. French and English magazines and serials from Europe of all types could also be obtained through Waters.

The printers were usually booksellers as well as stationers. Such was the case with John P. Des Forges who also advertised himself as being an agent for Harper's and Putnam's magazines. Cushing and Bailey were in this category, except for the fact that they described themselves as being booksellers and stationers, not printers. Their store was well stocked with books of all kinds, and stationery of all styles. Here was published a catalogue of law books which could be had on application. One wonders if the printing industry was very profitable because of the other enterprises (bookselling, etc.) or in spite of these other undertakings.
